Creating Layers After you crop, edit, and adjust colors and settings, the first thing to do is create layers to hold the various modifications and edits you make to your image. Elements provides three basic tools to create layers: Layer, Layers, and New Layer. * Layer: Layers are used for basic and quick image editing and organizing. You add a layer to an image by selecting the Layer tool and then clicking to add a new layer to an image. You can use other tools to quickly create and then move an image's layers to where you want them. with the traditional route. It is therefore understandable why many migrants also go through the regular channel. According to the Zamnija Kuka (or Kuke, those who choose to be paid in chicken – kuka means chicken in Albanian), it costs about 4,000 Lek (about US$ 90 as of July 2016) to be smuggled to the EU. This is lower than the ‘regular’ route, which cost around 7,000 Lek (US$ 160). Elderly refugees tell stories of people ending up dead on the border, many are missing and a small number of the migrants who travel through the border are successful in reaching the EU. One example was a young man who was smuggled from Serbia to Sweden using a rickety raft. He was able to escape but was arrested in Sweden; afterwards, he decided not to return to Serbia. The elderly refugees who returned to the villages of Fier and Himarë tell stories of people ending up dead on the border, many are missing and a small number of the migrants who travel through the border are successful in reaching the EU. The migration flows and subsequent return flows show that the border between Albania and Italy is a crossing point for active and passive migration, which is far from the traditional route. According to UNHCR (2017), more than 3,000 people have come through the border since 2013. Among them, 2,214 were minors and 684 were women. A large number of return flows have also taken place. According to UNHCR (2017), 5,958 Albanians returned home in the past five years. In 2017, 2,941 people from Albania returned to the country. Return rates were higher than the numbers of new ones going to Albania. The rate of return to the country was 99 per 100,000 people. It is the highest return rate in the last five years. The majority of the returnees were men. The returns between January and May were equal to the returns for the same period in the same period last year. The number of returnees decreased in June, July and August. Social and legal protection Despite the fact that a significant portion of the population in Albania lives below the poverty line, the country provides migrants and refugees with low-income social and legal protection. For this reason, Albanian institutions of the ECHO (European Centre for Migration and Refugees) and the UNHCR consider Albania to be a “deprivation country”. They assert that the

In recent years, security needs increase for a wireless signal, and most communication technologies supporting an increase in communication capacity provide a plurality of access points (AP) and adopt an access point coordination function. For example, WO2013/158655 discloses a technique of performing wireless communication by arranging a plurality of APs of a plurality of communication providers in a range, where each of the plurality of APs is arranged at an end of a range, so that a radio wave, which has propagated from one AP to another AP through a radio channel, is not changed in a predetermined time. Further, in Non-Patent Document 1 (“Bluetooth Low Energy: Enhance Security in Bluetooth EDR”, IETF document RFC 4306), the BTLE standard defines that one or more secure devices, such as a proximity beacons, i.e. a resource referred to as an Access Point Device (“APD”), an extended access point or a digital identity (ID) source, which cannot be replicated by a device other than the APD, is securely introduced in a network. Here, an AP is a device that transmits information, which is not intended for a receiver, to other APs via a radio channel. In particular, when an AP and a plurality of devices are arranged so as to form an ad hoc network, they are in a state where they construct the ad hoc network themselves. Therefore, each device can be identified by the AP. On the other hand, the AP may also transmit unnecessary information, such as information concerning a security level of the device, to other APs. Therefore, the respective APs may not recognize a relation between the device and the AP. Accordingly, a communication protocol in which such a relation is checked for each device is needed. FIGS. 10A and 10B are diagrams illustrating a conventional example. FIG. 10A is a diagram illustrating a case where a conventional communication protocol is used in which information concerning a security level of a device is transmitted from an AP to a device in a network. In FIG. 10A, authentication between the AP and the device is performed in step S1. Then, the device transmits information concerning a security level to the AP in step S2, where the information is used for authenticating the device in step S3. Accordingly, the device is positively authenticated by the AP. However, since the device may transmit the information concerning the security level to the AP even when the AP does not
